IN MEMORY OF M'DONALD

General Sorrow for the Death of the Ex-Senator, Whom Every One Esteemed.

Tribute from a Former Partner and Many Telegrams of Sympathy to the Afflicted Family-The Arrangements for the Funeral.

When it was known yesterday morning that ex-Senator McDonald was dead, the feeling of sorrow that every one expressed showed the high value his fellow-citizens placed upon him. There was no one without sympathy, and among no class was this more keenly felt than the younger members of the bar. From them came expressions of the tenor of Mr. A. L. Mason's tribute to the distinguished lawyer. "I Wisconsin. was closely associated with Mr. McDonald, at first as a law student," said Mr. Mason yesterday to a Journal reporter, "later as his partner. During those years a lively affection grew up in my heart for him. He was the soul of kindness and of gentle tolerance toward young men. He overlooked faults and spoke the word of encouragement in a way that cheered the spirits and freshened the ambition. He gave advice rarely to the boys in the office. but when he gave it it was to the point. One evening an argument about religion between A. B. Anderson, now the brilliant young lawyer at Crawfordsville, and myaelf, draw Mr. McDonald's attention. He best first impressions, the soundest off-hand judgment, that I have met with. He saw the underlying principle of a case quickly and clearly, and in a general consultation he was a tower of strength. The common sense of the man was immense, and the principles of equity were as clear to his mind as they are obscure to many lawyers. Having taken a quick, clear view of a question it was characteristic of the man to abide by his opinion and pursue it untlinehsister of Mrs. McDonald, arrived in the city abide by his opinion and pursue it untimelingity to the end. He pridest himself on his Scotch ancestry. He used to tell us of the battle, or massacre, where the McDonald clan were almost exterminated. Firmness, persistence were a matter of pride with him. These characteristics of his mind were more apparent to the public on political questions. He stood like a rock unchanged amid the swirls of public opinion. He could not change. He was not built that way. And yet over the rock there grow the mosses and flowers of kindness and tolerance, of charity and of patience. To me he was happily constituted. He bore his sorrows, and they were many, like a philosopher, a stoic. 'He was the noblest Roman of them all.' His endurance was of that uncomplaining sort. You could see no sign of it, except in the strong lines of repression which marked his mouth. Yet to his patient endurance was united a strong and constant love of the piesatures of the world. He liked the good things of this life. He enjoyed them with a vast and cheerful capacity for enjoyment. He knew the exact spot in Washington where the best oyster stews were to be had, and I think that a recipe he gave me for a salad dressing, which he always made for said and a lithink that a recipe he gave me for a salad dressing, which he always made for me and dressing, which he always made for me and me to the public of the product of th where the best cyster stews were to be had, and I think that a recipe he gave me for a salad dressing, which he always made for himself at the table, has done me as much good as his instruction in law. He had the was on the winning side of his case. If, at last, defeat came, I could never get him to open his lips about it. He had nusheory of defeat, but only for success. He liked a good story and a good dinner, good horses and good company. He trusted everybody about him without feserve. His confidence in human nature was always greater than his distrust. He assumed everybody to be his friend. If there came a time when he was betrayed, the same unchangeable and persistent quality with which he adhered to his friends appeared in the silent but deathless dislike for the enemy."

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FUNERAL. The general desire to honor the memory of Mr. McDonald caused an effort to be made to have the body taken to the Capitol, there to lie in state. This was suggested to Mrs. McDonaid, but she declined to have it done, as she said it was ber husband's desire to be buried without ostentation. Accordingly the funeral will take place at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, at the family residence, No. 564 North Meridian street. The Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, of the Second Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Haines, of the First, will conduct the exercises, and from 1 to 3 o'clock that afternoon the public will be allowed to view the remains. So bravely did Mr. McDonaid meet his death that he, on Sunday, when all hope was gone, gave directions as to the funeral, even to naming the pall-bearers. All of these are to be home friends except three he designated to come from outside the city. Those from the city will be Gen. T. A. Morris, A. L. Roache, John W. Murphy, John T. Frenzel and John M. Butler, with John S. Williams, Lafayette, R. J. Bright, Washington, and either Judge Gresham or Harlan. The desire to meet the wishes he expressed in regard to his funeral was a cherrished that the Hendricks Club directors yesterday afternoon appointed a committee to learn from Mrs. McDonaid meet the wishes a cherrished that the Hendricks Club directors yesterday afternoon appointed a committee to learn from Mrs. McDonaid meet the wishes a cherrished that the Hendricks Club directors yesterday afternoon appointed a committee to learn from Mrs. McDonaid gested to Mrs. McDonald, but she declined directors yesterday afternoon appointed a committee to learn from Mrs. McDonald whether it would be going beyond the arrangements proposed to have that organization attend in a body. Her answer permitted the club to take that course and this evening a meeting will be held to per-tect arrangements. It is urged that every member attend and be in line, as well, on Wednesday. The Gray Club will also be there, and aside from these two organizations there will be no other organized bodies in there will be no other organized bodies in the procession. The City Council and officials, though, will meet at the Council chamber to-morrow afternoon, at 1 o'clock, and from there go to the McDonald residence. Messrs. Coy, Murphy and Dunn are to arrange for carriages and flowers, and Messrs. McGill. Burns, Olsen. Pearson, Martindale and City Attorney Bailey will prepare resolutions of condolence to be adopted at a future meeting of Council. The State offices will be closed for the rest of the day at 12 o'clock, noon, to-morrow, and flags will be hung at half-mast all over Telegrams of Sympathy, Such tributes were not uncommon whenever the name of McDonald was mentioned yesterday, and that was always, for whenever two men met there was something to say about the learned lawyer and great. too in telegrams from many sections of the country. Among the first received was that from President Harrison, which read: Mrs. Harrison joins me in offering to you and to the family a most sincere sympathy in the great sorrow which has fallen not only upon you but upon the community in the death of Mr. Mc-Donald. I regret that I am not able to unite with other home friends in the last office of respect and honor.

Chief-justice Fuller, at New York, ad dressed John M. Butler as follows: Have heard with profound sadness of the death of my old friend.

This was soon followed by a telegram to Mrs. McDonald, dated Chicago, from Justice Harian, reading:

I deeply sympathize with you in your sorrow. In the death of your husband the country sustains a great loss. He was a grand, noble man; clean-brinded, and true under all circumstances to his convictions of right.

From Senator Voorbees, at Terre Haute, came to Mrs. McDopald:

My sense of your loss is inexpressible, and my sympathy beyond words. The people of Indiana and of the whole country will join you in mourning the death of Joseph E. McDouald. In his life and in his death he gave to the world an exemple of honor, courage and ability never surpassed in our history, and worthy of all acceptance by the present and future representant. ance by the present and future generations. Clem Studebaker telegraphed as tellows:

I feel that in the death of your husband the State and the country lose one of their most dis-tinguished and bonorable public men. Accept my heartfelt sympathy. Congressman Bynum, from Washington.

Mrs. Campbell and I have heard with deep sorrow of the Senator's death. We beg to ex-tend to you our sincerest sympathy. Henry and Mrs. Watterson telegraphed:
"In the death of your noble husband we lose an old and true friend."

The telegram of Congressman and Mrs.
Caruth was that they joined "in the universal sorrow over the death of that great and good man, your husband." Congressman Wilson expressed his heartiest sympathy, and continued with, "I admired him as a statesman and loved him as a friend." The expression of James N. Tyner was: "A useful and honorable career closed when your husband died." Ex-Assistant Postmaster-general Stevenson telegraphed:
"The American people honor the memory of Joseph E. McDonald." Other telegrams of Kentucky; Senor Guzeman, Nicarauguan minister to the United States; Senator Jonas, of Louisiana, and Senator Vilas, of Meeting of Judges and Lawyers.

An effort was made yesterday afternoon by W. A. Ketcham, president of the Indianapolis Bar Association, to reach. provided illuminations, thousands of Japanese lanterns of all shapes, colors and sizes being artistically arranged about houses and trees. Each householder was a host and with his family was ready to receive all friends and entertain them upon the porch. There were few people indoors, as the perfect June night and hundreds of visitors pass-ing and repassing, walking or driving, was too tempting a scene for anyone to lose. At the center of the place an orchestra was stationed and the music sounded far and near. Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies, and the arrangements were so well made that there was only a trifling delay in the service.

Central Labor Union. At the meeting of the Central Labor Union last night a communication from the strikers of the Western Lime Company, at Huntington, was read. The union of lime-workers of that place asks, inasmuch as Indianapolis is the principal market of the company, that help be extended the strikers by organized labor of this city. The matter was referred to the committee on grievances and appeals, with instructions to confer with the Building-trades Council. The saw-makers reported that their demand for a nine-hour day had been met with an offer of an hour's day had been met with an offer of an hour's extra pay during the busy season, and the promise of a nine-hour day with ten-hour pay when work is dull.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

An Indianapolis Student Chosen as One of the Class Historians at Yale. NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 22 .- The commencement exercises at Yale opened in earnest to-day. Train after train brought friends of the graduating class and alumni, who are to attend the various class reunions. The exercises this morning consisted of the delivery of the class oration and the reading of the class poem in Battel Chapel. The orator was Francis T. Brown, of Glens Falls, N. Y., and the subject was "Culture and Service." The poem was read by Luther Henry Luker, of Albany, N. Y., the class poet. The college was crowded with spectators. The exercises were held just south of the Treasury build-ing, the erection of the new Welch dormitory preventing the use of the spot which had been used for a quarter of a century.

The class historians were Ashbel Green, jr., Troy. N. Y.; Joseph R. Herod, of Indianapolis: John B. Sears, of Chicago, and Harry W. Tweedy, of Binghamton, N. Y.

Chicago's Speculator Shows Himself on the New York Exchange-Both "Bull" and "Bear."

NEW YORK, June 22 .- "Old Hutch," as B. P. Hutchinson, Chicago's famous grain speculator, is affectionately known in exchange circles throughout the country, this morning appeared on the floor of the Produce Exchange in this city for the first time in eight years. He wore the same costume that has for years made him a marked figure on the Chicago Board of Trade. He sat on the grain side of the room with his chair tilted back, surrounded by an ever-changing group of acquaint-ances, with a circle of curious grain and flour men who had never seen him be-fore forming a background to the scene. Mr. Hutchinson said he expected to remain in the city for some time, though exactly how long he would not or could not say. He stated, also, in answer to further inquiries, that he was operating in the market at the present time, but would give no further particulars except that he was a "bull" on grain and a "bear" on provisions. He is in good financial condition, he said, and in proof of this he hauled out from the inner depths of one of his trousers pockets a wallet containing some bills and several checks.
